THE REASON WHY

THE county commissioners turned down a bill from the Bonanza for supplying a set of bound copies of this paper. The only reason was that the legal department advised the commissioners that they were not compelled to preserve copies of the several papers printed in this county. Hearing of this, the manager of the Bounnza went in person to the courthouse and removed the files in question. For the enlightenment of the commissioners it may be stated that the law is compulsory and that the same official who advised against levying the school assessment was compelled by mandamus of court to eat his own words and must come to time with reference to the Bonanza. It is not a matter of this or any other paper which the administration may choose to favor, but it is the law. The statutes make it compulsory for each county in the state to preserve complete files of every publication issued within its jurisdiction. The law is as mandatory as the law requiring the counties to levy any assessment that may be demanded by school trustees and there cannot be any option on the part of any board of county commissioners. The files are in the Bonanza office and, when they are wanted, in order to comply with the law, the Johnson and Spencer, county will have to secure them at a cost more commensurate with the value. The object of the law is obvious. One of the first principles of the founders of the state was to preserve records of contemporaneous history, which can only be had through the regular daily and weekly newspapers. As there is no local historical agency it devolves on the county to do its share in saving for the future generation facts and statements that may become of inestimable value.

RELIABLE NEWS SERVICE

WHEN the Associated Press allows its name to be used in connection with news matters it is positive that the story cisco Villa, wife of the bandit, arrived is reliable and the sources of information trustworthy. When there is the least doubt of the authenticity of any reports sent from the Associated Press agencies it is carried as "It is reported" or "it city jail. She has been in Havana is said" or "an official of the state department says," etc., etc., since her husband took the field as Whenever there is the least doubt the story sent out by the a bandit. She came here quietly and Associated Press is qualified in such a way that the reader knows house of a friend when she was taken exactly what to think and what weight to attach to the matter in charge by the police, under discussion. There is no middle course. The service stands for nothing by the truth. As a news collecting agency it is without a peer and its service must be without any bias since it is printed by newspapers of every shade of political opinion. Every employe is under instructions to send out nothing but facts and not to permit his own individual opinion to transform, distort or exaggerate events that occur in his province. In this connection it may be explained that every newspaper taking the Associated Press report is a member of the organization and also an employe for the purpose of collecting news and disseminating information, collecting news and disseminating information.

A striking illustration of the tenacity of the A. P. for sending of Sec. 15. T. S. N. R. 48 E., M. D. B. M., unsurveyed land, by means of the service but what can be getablished as the truth many be serviced and discharge and II & cubic. out nothing but what can be established as the truth may be found in a story that was industriously circulated the day after the massacre at Carrizal. Another news gathering agency sent out a statement that a fleet of Japanese warships hovered around the coast of Mexico with the evident intention of landing a force to assist the Carranza government in resisting American demands. Not satisfied with the bare assertion of the existence of this fleet. the Munchausens went on to elaborate the account with all the trimmings familiar to yellow journalism, with the following result: One of these warships was stranded on the coast. This was done designedly to furnish a pretext for the vessel to remain in the neighborhood and to blind the American government to the fact that she was there for an ulterior purpose. The writer, or the central office of this unreliable agency, went on to enlighten the public to the extent of declaring the stranded ship was loaded with munitions of war that would be turned against the American people. The conclusion was obvious. If Japan were guilty of such an absurd indiscretion it would be tantamount to a declaration of war. It was essential that the story should be verified or contradicted. The sponsor for the original story let it rest with the assumption of its veracity, but the Associated Press, with its unexampled service, set about securing positive knowledge. If the story proved true it would mean more to the American people than if a dozen revolutions had broken loose in Mexico, for it would have involved the United States in the world's war. The wires were set to work. with the result that the Associated Press the same day was the only agency that probed the story to the bottom until it was proved worthless. The sifting process proved that there was not a Japanese warship within a thousand miles of the American Pacific coast; therefore no vessel of that or any other nation was stranded in dangerous proximity to Mexico. The day after, by pursuing the question to the fountainhead at Tokio, the Associated Press secured an official repudiation of the entire story.

This is merely a specimen of the service given the Tonopah Bonanza, which is furnished with the cream of the news every day. When you see it in the Bonanza you know its right and can act accordingly.

Don't forget to swat the fly. The poor beast has had a hard time getting busy this year, but he is now in action and multiplying rapidly. Therefore, swat the fly, and keep on swatting.

The paper with the bona fide circulation pays advertisers best. People who read the Bonanza pay for it because they want the Bonanza and today's news today. The Bonanza's circulation is a permanent and growing one and not temporary.

DOING A RUSHING BUSINESS AROUND MINERAL COUNTY

For the month of May the ore onnage out of Mina and Sodaville over the Southern Pacific was 2,200,-Seven thousand tons the narrow gauge to the broad gauge Twenty-five to twenty-eight men have been employed steadily on the transfer platform handling freight and two trains with three engines to each rain daily over the narrow gauge have been necessary to handle the constantly increasing business from the south. These cold blooded facts are what spell prosperity for this part of Mineral county.-Western Nevada Miner
